The theft of business information by malicious insiders and hackers costs the U.S. hundreds of billion dollars a year. It also results in the loss of U.S. jobs and competitiveness. Byron will highlight some of the biggest cyber threats to Wisconsin businesses and individuals and suggest some possible mitigations. He will highlight the important role of establishing public-private partnerships in securing U.S. trade secrets and personal information against these threats.

Byron is a Special Agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and has worked national security investigations for over 18 years. He is currently assigned to FBI Milwaukee's Cyber Squad, where his job is to develop security partnerships between the FBI and private industry, academia, and state/local government agencies to better protect the United States against cyber and economic espionage threats.
