Families in business together are facing tough decisions every day that require thorough and complementary interpersonal skills. Communication skills are simply a necessity; yet, skills developed solely within an individual may not be the final answer for a successful family business to navigate such dicey questions. Often, a breakdown in group communication indicates inadequate skills among its members. But more often, a breakdown is due to the lack of practice (or a lifetime of bad habits) applying those individual skills with one another in a family setting, or is the result of poor system or organizational arrangements. In other cases, miscommunication or the absence of it altogether precipitates from the contradictory nature of families and their businesses.

In this workshop, Sharon Krone will help participants

- Recognize the three different perspectives of family, owners, and managers and specify the conflicting motivations among these three
- Identify best practices in family communications
- Distinguish between Speaker and Receiver responsibilities within a family communication system
- Understand examples of Advocacy and Inquiry speech patterns and their corresponding effects within a family context
- Select communication techniques not historically found in one’s repertoire, and practice applying some, or all, of them in a defined group activity
- Identify and describe the different responses to conflict, including an advantage/disadvantage for each in a family setting

With a special interest in the “learning family”, Krone brings the Forum her expertise in creating custom-designed educational programs for entire families or generational groups who desire to grow and learn as a group.
Leveraging Your Strengths as a Leader

October 24, 2006, 3-6 pm
Butte de Morts Country Club, Appleton
Amy Biersteker & Thom Cody, Pathmakers, Inc.

Whether your business most resembles a Volkswagen Beetle, or luxury touring coach, the key to success lies in the passengers. It is essential to have the right people on the bus and even more important to have the people in the right seats on the bus. In a family business, this often presents a great challenge. Many times we hold several varying roles within the business, we take on roles based on necessity, not our skill set, or even our interests. In some cases, we do not even have a clear map of where the bus is headed, resulting in many backseat drivers.

In this session, Thom and Amy will help you familiarize yourself with various leadership styles. They will also introduce you to the concept of leveraging your values, leadership style, and skill set to impact your organization. The end result for you is leadership that is culturally aligned with the vision of your organization, and roles that allow leadership to leverage their strengths and positively impact those around them.

Attend to gain an understanding of your leadership style and its impact on your business and to learn to leverage your strengths and surround yourself with the right people to complement your strengths. Amy and Thom will challenge you to begin to lead your business and your team from a place of freedom in this workshop.

JAG Outdoor Advertising, Inc.

Founded in 1946 by Gerald (Jag) Haegle, JAG Outdoor Advertising, Inc. of Algoma became a member of the Forum in January of 2002. Primarily a billboard company, JAG Outdoor also designs and produces handcrafted signs, vehicle lettering, banners and other similar signage.

In 2002, Jane Sweasy, one of Jag’s five daughters, was working for her father as a sales representative. JAG Outdoor had approximately 400 outdoor advertising locations throughout northeast Wisconsin and employed about 11. Today, with the guidance and help of Forum members and sponsors, JAG’s ownership has successfully transitioned to Jane and her sisters, with Jag’s blessing. And, the family involvement has grown. Jag, Chairman of the Board, and Jane, now president, have been joined by Jane’s brother-in-law, Patrick Heil, vice president of operations.

As a member, JAG Outdoor has been a strong participant in Forum programs and peer groups. Jane has also been a wonderful advocate for the Forum, introducing many family businesses to the Forum’s benefits as she has experienced them.

About a year ago, her enthusiasm and commitment to the Forum led her to offer the Forum billboard space. With the Board’s approval, JAG has been busy designing a billboard for the Forum. JAG’s contribution of billboard space will provide the Forum excellent visibility in the highway 41 corridor between Kaukauna and Green Bay during the coming year. This is perfect timing for the Forum’s expansion to the Green Bay area.

As a non-profit organization with a very limited marketing budget, this is a very significant contribution and benefit to the Forum.

Peer Groups

According to many of our members, the peer groups are among the most valued features of the Forum. They provide an excellent venue for family and non-family members with similar needs and interests to develop knowledge and skills, to learn from each other’s situations and experiences, and to develop valuable relationships.

Peer groups are usually composed of 8-10 participants who have similar needs and interests. The group members determine the focus and format of their meetings, and when and where to meet.

As we begin our new programming year, we are surveying our members and sponsors about interest in participating in a peer group. The survey, which was sent via our electronic mailing list, described each existing group and possible new groups, and inquired about interest in participating.

Group meeting schedules are being developed during September. For further information, a copy of the survey, or to join a group, contact Donna (nelsond@uwosh.edu) or Sue (schiesss@uwosh.edu).

Non-Family Group:

On July 18, Tim Wuest of Badger Mining Corporation gave the group a overview of their leadership development process and their leadership training. Group members found the presentation very helpful and asked many questions regarding how they might design and implement a similar development process in their organizations.

On September 26, the group will meet with Amy Biersteker and Thom Cody of Pathmakers to talk in more detail about the process of leadership assessment and development.

Non-family executives and managers of member businesses who are interested in attending the meetings of this group should contact Sue at the Forum office.

IT Group:

J.Keller will host the September 26 meeting of this group. The topic of discussion will be “rolling out a new software system.” If you are interested in participating, contact Sue.

Director’s Column
Sue Schierstedt

The Forum is expanding to Green Bay this year. Nevertheless, we will continue to offer programs in Appleton and peer groups throughout the region, as determined by each group. Our objective with this expansion is to better serve family businesses throughout northeast Wisconsin.

The March program, Harnessing the Power of an Independent Board, will be delivered to two sites. Our presenter, Norb Schwarz, will be presenting the program live at the UW Oshkosh site in the Regency Suites, Green Bay. At the same time, the program will be web cast, live, to the Fond du Lac area where we will have a moderator and small group discussions right along with the Green Bay participants. Participants at both sites will get full benefit of the program, including directing their questions to the presenter.

In addition to the March program, we are hosting a Get-Acquainted Reception on September 26 (see page 1) and two Best Practice sessions in Green Bay.

It is the Board’s hope that all our members will participate fully in this year’s programming and will help us share the benefits of the Forum with family businesses from all parts of northeast Wisconsin.

Are you in a profession that’s requires continuing education? Did you know that the Forum’s programs may give you some of the needed credits each year? If you want further information about this opportunity, please contact me. I would be happy to explain this in more detail.

Reminders:

- Forum members & sponsors can attend UW-Madison Family Business Center programs.
- familyforum@lists.uwosh.edu is our mailing list for your questions and announcements.
